The major countries in Europe are split between two alliances: the Triple Entente of France, Britain and Russia and the Triple Alliance of Austria-Hungary, Germany and Italy.	Germany wanted a navy as powerful as Britain's navy.
Austrian heir to the throne, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, was assassinated by Serbian assassins.	Britain was worried about Germany's growing desire for power. They began building up their own navy as a precaution.
Germany felt threatened from two sides because France and Russia were allies.	Empires in Europe (British, German, Austro-Hungarian, Russian and Ottoman) wanted to become bigger and more powerful.
